

Protecting ocean health

What does the Seattle Aquarium do to conserve energy and resources, which in turn protects ocean health?

We make sure we “walk the talk” regarding conservation issues within our facility. We work to ensure sustainability in all aspects of our operations, in ways that are mutually beneficial to all communities. Highlights of these efforts are pictured below.

solar panels

recycling and composting bins

rain barrels

low-flush toilets

air dryers

Draw a picture of you or your family doing something to help keep the ocean healthy. It can be something you already do or something you want to try. Share this picture with your family and tell them how you can help the ocean.

Ideas:

- Pack a no-waste lunch
- Recycle and/or compost
- Ride your bike rather than using a car
- Or come up with your own idea