10:25–11am Mapping the landscape of empathy research.
Format: Lightning Talks. Five minutes from each presenter on:
   • One to three things research tells us about empathy, especially vis-à-vis empathy for animals/wildlife and conservation.
   • One question or research direction that would be interesting to pursue.

Lightning Talk presenters:
   • Sara Konrath, Ph.D. The science of empathy.
   • Susan Clayton, Ph.D. Predictors and consequences of empathy.
   • Jerry Luebke, Ed.D. Empathy for animals: state or trait?
   • Nette Pletcher. Evaluation marks the spot: empathy is the treasure.
   • Louise Chawla, Ph.D. From empathy to environmental despair: helping children cope.

11:05–11:15am Fishbowl discussion: Jim Wharton, Wei Ying Wong, Ph.D., and Kathayoon Khalil, Ph.D., briefly reflect on and discuss key points from Lightning Talks.

11:15–11:50am Small-group break-out rooms to discuss (30–35 minutes plus optional break). Conceptboard documentation of themes from discussions.

noon–12:40pm Begin facilitated brainstorming of intriguing questions/new research directions. Whole-group discussion.

12:40–1pm Reflection: Summarize key themes and learnings from the day. Plan for what needs to happen next.

[End day one]

2:30pm Virtual Happy Hour (optional)
   Bring your empathy-themed cocktail or mocktail and get to know your colleagues! Bonus: we’ll do a meet and greet with our pets, plants or anything else we’ve cared for (sourdough starter, anyone?).
   Please join us!

Day two: Thursday, November 19 (all times Pacific)
Zoom link for all conference sessions. (Same as day one.)

9–9:30am Warm-up and greeting.
Reflection on first-day themes: think/pair/share conversations.

9:30–9:50am Investigating empathy case study No. 1.
Autumn Russell, director of education at Akron Zoo, presents a case study of empathy-related action research.

9:50–10:10am Investigating empathy case study No. 2.
Inger Lerstrup, Ph.D., University of Copenhagen, presents on preschoolers’ interactions with small animal life and with each other, and how these experiences may prepare a foundation for motivation to conserve forests and biodiversity.

10:10–10:15am Break.

10:15–11am Part one: Generating a research framework—articulating questions that could guide future research for the field.

11–11:10am Break.

11:10am–noon Part two: Generating a research framework—refining and prioritizing questions that could guide future research for the field.

noon–12:30pm Participants present opportunities for action research and/or ideas that may have come up during the conference and invite collaborators.

12:30–12:50pm Whole-group discussion: next steps.

12:50–1pm Wrap-up, thank-you and farewell.

[End day two]
